Hello all,

Thank you all for the feedback and comments provided on this document, both in Confluence and in a separate spreadsheet by Valeria, as well as during the review call we had on 11 Nov. I believe all of your feedback has been addressed now, and since no further comments have come in, I will now consider this document to have been endorsed by stakeholders. The next review step will be the head of the relevant function, in this case Frank Bolata.

Many thanks for your help and collaboration on this!

Sascha

Hello all,

Thank you very much for your inputs and feedback on this topic. I believe all of the open points have been addressed via document updates or clarification calls. Unless there are other points of feedback raised by COB Friday 28 November, I will need to consider this to have been endorsed by this group, as I'm getting chased by our PMO on this.

Regards,

Sascha

Hi James,

Thank you for passing this along. I already spoke with Valeria today on this topic.

@Valeria Carvalho I have inserted some statements clarifying that we expect to continue the use of WWI in the foreseeable future as the replacement for the SDS authoring capability is still very immature in S/4HANA and won't reach feature-parity until a later release of S/4HANA. Hence I believe that WWI is unavoidable.

Hello James, Francois, and Denis,

Owen has nominated you as stakeholders to review SyWay KDD085 on Document Management.

In order to meet PMO deadlines I would appreciate review comments or an endorsement by COB Friday 14 November, please. Please feel free to add comments directly into the document or approach myself directly to discuss.

@James Kyndt please request access via this link: <https://wiki.syensqo.com/x/dXiINw>

This document covers 4 different patterns in which documents are generated, processed, or referenced by SyWay processes, and recommends system solutions for each. The OpenText stack features strongly here as research has shown it to be the most pragmatic choice for SAP-centric use cases, despite our collective misgivings about OpenText's technology stack and vendor engagement.

Sascha
