

Confluence - Comment

Comments are ways to bring others into the conversation about a page or blog post. They allow you to remark on content, add important information, ask questions, and generally drive collaboration and teamwork.

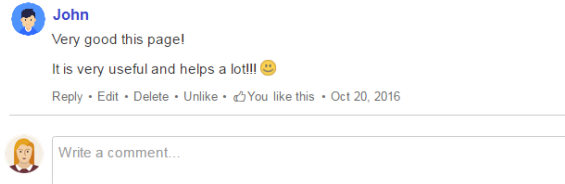

You can add a comment at the bottom of any page or blog post, or add an inline comment by highlighting specific text on the page.

Add a page comment

1. Type your comment in the comment field at the bottom of the page
2. Optionally, choose Preview to see how your comment will appear
3. By default, Watch this page is ticked
4. Choose Save

Other users can reply and/or like your comment, and you or a space administrator can edit your comment(s).

1 Comment

Add an inline comment

1. Highlight the text you want to comment on
2. Choose the add comment blocked URL button that appears above the highlighted text
3. Type your comment and choose Save

The selected text will appear with a yellow highlight indicating an inline comment; choose any highlighted text on the page to display the related comment(s).

Just like page comments, others can reply to, or like, your inline comments, and you'll be notified when they do.

Resolve inline comments

Hit Resolve to hide a set of inline comments once the conversation's finished. If you want to view resolved comments, choose blocked URL > Resolved comments; to reopen a resolved comment, choose Reopen at the bottom left.

Comment permissions

- Add a comment – You need the 'Add Comments' permission in the space.
- Edit a comment – You need the 'Add Comments' permission. Space administrators can edit all comments within their space. The date on a comment always indicates the time the comment was last edited.
- Delete a comment – You need the 'Remove Comments' permission. Deleted comments cannot be restored. If you don't have the 'Remove Comments' permission, you can delete your own comments, but only if there are no replies to your comment.
- Disable comments – If you don't want comments in a particular space, remove the 'Add Comments' permission from the 'confluence-users' or 'users' group, anonymous users and all other users and groups. The option to add comments will no longer appear on pages or blog posts in that space.
