

Japan's Kuraray shuts PMMA and MMA plant for annual turnaround

DATE : 2014-06-13

Japanese producer Kuraray has shut its 58,000 tonne/year polymethyl methacrylate (PMMA) and 67,000/tonne year acetone cyanohydrin-based methyl methacrylate (MMA) plants at Nakajo in Niigata prefecture for an annual turnaround, a company source said on Friday.

The plants were taken offline earlier in the week and will restart in sometime in July, the source added.

However, no immediate dates for the restart are available as of now, the source said.
