

Valspar Packaging expands capacity in Asia

DATE : 2016-07-18

By a News Reporter-Staff News Editor at Food Weekly News -- The Valspar Corporation announced that it is expanding production capacity at its Singapore facility to meet increased demand for its food and beverage packaging products in the Asia Pacific region. The expansion is expected to come on line in 2017.

"This investment represents another important milestone in our growth strategy for the region," said Louie Wang, managing director of Valspar's Asia Pacific Packaging business. "We have been experiencing strong growth, and this expansion, along with Valspar's recent capacity increase in China, positions us well to continue to meet rising customer demand. Valspar is the global technology leader in coatings for metal packaging, and as governments, industry and consumers show increased interest in high-performance products, Valspar is ready to deliver."

The capacity increase will enable Valspar to manufacture higher volumes of both existing and new technologies, including non-BPA coating solutions for the food and beverage markets.

Valspar is the No. 1 metal packaging coatings solutions provider in the world. Across all of Valspar's packaging solutions, the company adds value to can makers, end makers and brand owners through its technology leadership, regulatory expertise and best-in-class technical service. Valspar provides complete packaging solutions to reduce costs, improve performance and protect the quality of brands and products.

Source Food Weekly News