

China's Shanghai SECCO shuts ACN line for month-long maintenance

DATE : 2015-01-05

China's Shanghai SECCO Petrochemical has shut down its 260,000 tonne/year acrylonitrile (ACN) line in Shanghai for a month-long maintenance, a company source said on Monday.

The unit was taken off line early this month, the source said without specifying the shutdown date.

Shanghai SECCO has a new ACN that has the same capacity at the site that is expected to be started up in April, the source said.
